Adjectives - Article/Determiner

An article (or determiner) is a special kind of adjective. It tells if the noun is a general thing – an orange – or if it is a specific thing – the orange. The three articles are: a, an, the Circle the articles/determiners in the sentence below.

The girl dreamt that she saw an elephant driving a bus.

Missing articles/determiners are a common mistake, or typo, even for experienced writers! That's why all writers need an editor. Read the sentences below and edit them by marking the missing articles with an arrow. See the example.

I had soccer practice ^{an} hour ago.

Mom stopped by store on her way home.

Thomas watched ant walk over his shoe.

I want to be astronaut when I grow up.

Pot roast tasted gross.

Hanna grabbed apple on her way to school.

We drove over old bridge.

I heard great song today.

Dad threw baseball over my head.

Jaime loves comic book store.
